Co. Garage, Later Found In New Hampshire

The garage of Herrick Bros. Co., the J. B. Ham Co. grain mill, and the C. N. R. station were broken into last Thursday night and considerable damage done.

At the garage entrance was gained through the boiler room in the basement. They attempted to open the safe in the office but were unsuccessful although the door was badly damaged. The cash register was taken, together with from $12 to $15, and a 1930 Ford sport coupe. The car was found by police Saturday morning, abandoned in a freight yard at Dover, N. H., with the Herreick registration

The grain mill was entered through cellar window. Two revolvers were taken from the office. The safe was opened and about $10 taken. Papers and books from the safe and desks were scattered about the floor. The bandits entered the station by breaking one of the office windows and they went through to the waiting room, but nothing was disturbed.

Forgotten Heroes

Justice After 24 Years

THE man who had fought and died for the Union, who had been forgotten for 24 years, was now being remembered. The man was John Porter, a hero of the Civil War. He had been forgotten for 24 years, but now he was being remembered. The man was John Porter, a hero of the Civil War. He had been forgotten for 24 years, but now he was being remembered.

Gen. John Porter, commander of the Union forces, who had been "out-ant" by Stonewall Jackson and who had fought a battle of blunders, was ready to furnish such a scapegoat. He had given Maj. Gen. Pitt John Porter certain orders which, as the facts developed, were impossible to obey. He was in his report to the public, and after it was all over the public wanted a scapegoat.

Gen. John Porter, commander of the Union forces, who had been "out-ant" by Stonewall Jackson and who had fought a battle of blunders, was ready to furnish such a scapegoat. He had given Maj. Gen. Pitt John Porter certain orders which, as the facts developed, were impossible to obey. He was in his report to the public, and after it was all over the public wanted a scapegoat.

Up to this time Porter's record had been a brilliant one. But it could not save him from being made the victim of the second defeat at Manassas. In November, 1862, he was court-martialed at Washington and in a trial the result of which was a foregone conclusion, he was found guilty of the charges, discharged to orders and removed to the face of the enemy. "Out-ant" was the word used to describe his fate.

But Porter had proved himself a fighting man in the battlefield and a fighting man he was intended to continue being. For years he made repeated efforts to have his case reopened but his appeals fell upon deaf ears. Grant, while President, refused to interfere and it was not until 1886 that he was able to have his case reopened. The case was then thrown upon the case.

A military board under President Hayes acquitted Porter of all fault except cowardice. Porter's superior, in May, 1882, President Arthur remitted the sentence but voted a bill providing for the payment of back salary. Finally in 1886 a bill was passed by Congress and signed by President Cleveland making Porter a colonel of infantry in the regular army, to rank from May 14, 1861, and placing him in the retired list. After holding various still offices in New York, Porter died in May, 1901 and for a brief moment America recalled the hero of a 24-year fight for justice.

The Star On The Christmas Tree

by Katherine Eelman

AY, can I get some trimmings for a Christmas tree? Fix up the best assortment you've got, please."

Leah Masters looked up at the sound of the pleasant voice and a smile flashed across her face. "In just a moment," she answered, "as soon as I get this package tied up."

Carefully she went over the counter, selecting such things as she would put on a Christmas tree herself.

Yards and yards of silver tinsel, boxes of Christmas snow, numerous tree ornaments, several Santa Claus figures, and all the other things that go to make a Christmas tree a thing to exclaim about. And on the top of the box she put a beautiful shining silver star, carefully wrapped in tissue paper. Then she tied the package and handed it across the counter.

"Somebody's going to have a lovely Christmas," she said. "I can imagine how beautiful this tree will look."

The man took the box and started to move away, then returned rather slowly. "Excuse me," he stammered, "but—there was something about the way you said that that set me to thinking. Do you have folks of your own, and—"

For a moment Leah Masters was silent, then she looked into the strong, kind face, she answered: "The only relative I have, an uncle, lives in Montana, and—"

Then John Anderson told her some thing of his own life. He had got away at twenty-two and had been abroad as the representative of a large concern—now, after five years he had come back at the request of his father, to help him with his business. His father and mother were growing old. And because he had come back, they wanted a Christmas tree, and so he had come for the tree.

Later that evening, just as Leah Masters was getting ready to go to bed, she looked up to find John Anderson standing by the counter. He was accompanied by a sweet little lady, his mother. Leah had not had time to introduce them. "I've had to bring mother down," Leah said. "I told her about just what you said, and she insisted that you should meet her with us. You've got to see the Christmas tree, you know; you had a part in its making."

The days that followed were the happiest Leah Masters had ever known. The joy of Christmas was a multiplied joy by the kindness and attention shown her. The Anderson family left nothing undone to make her happy. And they told her over and over again how much her coming had meant to them all. There was but one thing that Leah did not understand. Why did they all seem so happy? Ever since I put that star on the Christmas tree, it seems like a symbol of the happiness that lies ahead for us two."

Snow at Christmastide

There is an incalculable loveliness in the snowy Christmas. There's a fascination in watching a snowstorm, especially one at Yuletide, that is unsurpassed by the charm of any other aspect of nature. Snow is beauty's alter ego. It is that of moonlight, stealing the visible universe in radiant bloom. There is a power of gentleness in it that we seldom dream of. Snow is gentleness, chaste as the mountain air, virginally cool, compassionately adorning the faded earth.—American Magazine.

Always Memorable

Christmastide, with its warm spirit of fellowship, its renewal of old friendships, its generosity and joy, is always an occasion to be remembered.—American Magazine.

SOUTH WOODSTOCK

Mrs. Omer Brown of Bryant Pond spent Wednesday and Thursday with her daughter, Mrs. Velma Davis, at the Davis home.

The Willing Workers held a meeting at the Methodist Union Church Wednesday. A good attendance was reported. Several through illness were unable to attend.

Myrtle Thurlow substituted at Union School while the assistant teacher, Mrs. Olive Davis, was at Portland attending State Grange. Mrs. Thurlow has great natural ability in getting the younger children to enjoy as well as thoroughly do their work.

Guyson Davis was at home and spent the Thanksgiving recess with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Davis.

Fred Cash is assisting at the home of Everett Howe at Bryant Pond.

Anson Cash is suffering from kidney trouble at his home here.

Gayden Davis and Ralph Brooks are spending this week camping while hunting for deer near Grafton.

Gerald Benson has charge of stacking the pine lumber delivered by Benson Brothers at the casket manufactory here.

Asa Harriman from Nashua, N. H., is working for Alvah Hendrickson and will move his family here as soon as a rent is found.

Fred Hendrickson is again very poorly and unable at times to leave his room.

Christmas is near. We all would like to give and receive at Christmas time, and what can or could be better than a real cheerful letter giving all the little incidents of our home life such as would interest the relative or friend, seemingly a warm handclasp, carrying a friendly greeting with its merry Christmas wishes.

TWO-MINUTE SERMON

by REV. GEORGE HENRY

BROAD SYMPATHY

I knew a woman, who in the days before the Eighteenth Amendment, sympathized so deeply with the wives of poor drunkards that she had nothing but hatred in her heart for the saloon keeper. Thus her sympathies were narrowed and her sense of justice and mercy dwarfed, and much of the sweetness of her nature destroyed. She had pity and patience and mercy for the murderer in his cell, but none for the bartender, who may have needed nothing but the sympathy and guidance of good men and women to lead him into a better business. She made herself one-sided, simply because she failed to recognize that the drunkard's wife and the saloon keeper's wife were children of the same Father and that she was the sister of both. Let us remember that Christ died for the ungodly and sinful. His sympathies were as broad as humanity. Because you hate sin is no reason for the hatred you feel toward the sinner. God will deal so with you.

Historical Interest of Old Eastern Navy Yard

The Boston Navy Yard, the second oldest in the United States, has an interesting history. It was established in 1800, and during the Civil War, it was the largest shipyard in the world. It has been a center of naval activity ever since.

For many years, the yard has been a center of naval activity. It has been the site of many important events, and it has played a major role in the development of the United States Navy. The yard is now a part of the Naval Air Station, and it continues to be an important center of naval activity.

But when the Confederate General Merriman came to the yard, he found it in a state of disrepair. The yard was in need of major repairs, and it was not until after the war that the yard was able to resume its normal operations.

It was not until after the war that the yard was able to resume its normal operations. The yard was in a state of disrepair, and it was not until after the war that the yard was able to resume its normal operations.

Indications of the yard's history are still visible today. The yard is a testament to the importance of the United States Navy, and it is a reminder of the role that the yard has played in the development of the Navy.

SWIMMING IS MOST IN FAVOR WITH TOURISTS

That summer tourists in Maine prefer swimming to all other sports is shown as the results of a postcard tabulation made by the Maine Publicity Bureau. These figures are based on the replies on postcard form sent out each spring by the Bureau in answer to the first letter of inquiry sent by a prospective tourist. An analysis of 166 of these replies shows that swimming is in first place, canoeing second and hiking trips third. Fishing is fourth and then, in the following order, comes surf bathing, mountain climbing, horseback riding, golf, hunting and tennis. Eleven persons mentioned their desire for relief from hay fever as their reason for wishing to make the trip.

Of the 166 nearly two-thirds were making their first trip to Maine, indicating that the State advertising campaign is bringing many more new people here and also is bringing back numbers who had visited Maine in previous years. The average number of parties included two people, 75 of the replies giving this number, while 23 stated there would be four visitors and 20 put the number at three. The largest number in any one party planning a trip was nine.

Cecil Brown, a Weycross, Ga., new-boy, recently demonstrated an ability to do much with little which would arouse envy in any ambitious financier. Cecil, with other boys, was at the office of the Journal-Herald, the afternoon newspaper of Weycross. He had five cents, his sole capital, and put it to work with astonishing results. Here is the story, according to Cecil:

"There were four of us boys, and I owed one of 'em a dime. I paid him a nickel on account. He paid another boy a nickel he owed him, and that one paid the fourth boy. This last boy happened to owe me five cents, and he paid me. That gave my nickel back. So I handed it to the boy to whom I had owed a dime, so that when he got the five-cent piece a second time he was paid in full. One nickel got all four of us out of debt."

Weycross financiers and economists are considering taking Cecil on a tour of South Georgia to show people what can be done if somebody will spend some money and start the pay-up ball rolling.

FULL TIME IN HERRING BUSINESS

There is no such thing as industrial depression in Lubec. The population is about 2500 and at present time there are 17 smoked herring plants, practically all of which are working full time with an estimated payroll of $5,000. In addition 25 heads of families are employed by the government in the Coast Guard service. Many women are employed cartoning sardines.

Did you know that the ancient town of Arundel, Maine, was founded in 1629 and retained its name until 1820 when it was changed to Kennebunkport? The original site of the town is now a little point of land jutting into the sea with seals playing on the nearby rocks.

POTPOURRI

Metal Plating
Electric plating makes it possible to plate steel, gold, silver, or other metal on a cheap metal much easier and cheaper than the old Sheffield method by which metals were welded together at high temperature. The article to be plated is immersed in a solution of the desired metal. An electric current passing through it attracts the fine metal particles.

IN FAIREST HUE

She's not an artist—goodness, no!—
This little girl of mine.
No sketch of hers will ever show
One touch of genius fine.
But still she likes to show to me
Each little thing she draws—
And as her handiwork I see,
I point to her no flaws.

But best of all, Miss Goldie Locks,
(Her hair shows golden glints).
Delights to use the little box
That's filled with colored tints!
She likes to take the magazines
We've read and thrown away,
And color them with reds and greens,
And all the colors gay.

She never paints with somber hues—
The grays, the browns and such.
But to the frocks, the hats, the shoes,
She gives the brilliant touch!
And as she grows to older age,
As little folks must do,
I pray she'll paint each single page
Of life, in fairest hue!
